

MOOSE INSTAL NEW OFFICERS

Ceremony Takes Place at Plymouth Rock

Special Dispatch to the Globe

PLYMOUTH, July 5.—Newly installed supreme officers of the Loyal Order of Moose, at exercises held in front of historic Plymouth Rock this afternoon, heard the leader of a band of modern Pilgrims, United States Senator James J. Davis, Pilgrim Governor of the movement, declare that today more than ever, the country needs the spirit of the old pioneers who first set foot on the land on which they were standing.

"We should rededicate ourselves today on this hallowed spot to the principles for which the early settlers fought and gave their lives," the speaker urged upon nearly 200 members of the order who had journeyed to Plymouth.

Skies that smiled all through the week of the 47th annual convention of the Supreme Lodge of the Moose, in Boston, did not fail the visitors here. Earlier in the day, the members of the fraternal organization were entertained at luncheon in Pilgrim Memorial Hall by the town.

Inspiring Ceremony

Inspiring to all who witnessed it was the ceremony in which the supreme officers, all of them Pilgrims in the order, were installed by Senator Davis. Right hand over the heart, left hand upraised, the little group of men, in the black gowns and purple hats, lined up in front of the stand which had been erected.

As their installing officer and the guiding force of the movement read the oath of office the men and the one woman who are to guide the destinies of the Moose the coming year, solemnly repeated the "obligation."

With the monument in the immediate background the group swore to faithfully perform the duties required of them, to use my best endeavors to advance the principle of care and service to the dependent child and our aged brothers, and in closing reconsecrated themselves to Mooseheart and Moosehaven.

Shortly after, arriving in special buses and private cars the members of the party went into Pilgrim Memorial Hall, where after luncheon they were welcomed by Morton Gillingwood, president of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce, and by Charles Moning for the Selectmen.

Senator Davis Speaks

Senator Davis, director-general of the Moose, reflecting the great pleasure of the officials of the order with the manner in which the convention had been received, promised that the Moose would again come back to Boston for their meeting, when things would get back to normal and four times as many people could come.

Calling the memorial in which the luncheon had been served one of the finest memorials to war dead he had ever seen, he commented that the construction of such memorials was a good way to share the wealth. His declaration, that "there is only one way to share the wealth and that is by paying wages to people who work," brought applause from the gathering.

He assured his hearers that the story of Plymouth and its historical significance will be the subject of the greatest advertising campaign America has ever seen. Plymouth Rock and the Constitution of the United States and the lessons of both will be brought to the people as they have never been, he said, as he instructed the chairman of the resolutions committee of the convention to draw up a resolution stating that "if ever there were a time when the spirit of the old pioneer Pilgrim Fathers was needed, that time is now."

Thanks by Dr Buehler

Dr. William E. Buehler of Chicago, supreme dictator of the Moose, repeated the gratitude and appreciation of the members of the order for the wonderful welcome given them and expressed his personal thanks to individuals. Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder of the Women of the Moose, spoke briefly.

At the exercises at Plymouth Rock, Senator Davis, in his address following the installation, asserted that the Moose have held fast to the true principles of the Pilgrim founders in providing for those who are dependent and was confident that were the Pilgrims present they would endorse the things done by the order.

"The men of the order, with courage and I am confident that we can do the same. If we do we shall make the next 300 years of history in our country, just as glorious as the past 300," he said.

Walter S. Ruff of Canton, O., the newly installed supreme dictator, calling attention to the 4th of July celebration of the day before, declared that the meaning of the Declaration of Independence is as true today as when the Declaration was adopted. He stressed the patriotic nature of the fraternal body which he now heads. Joe Mitchell Chapple was another speaker.

New Officers Installed

With Mr Ruff as supreme dictator, the other officers installed included William A. Anderson of Indianapolis, supreme vice dictator; William J. Egan of Newark, N. J., supreme private; Harry W. Mace of Philadelphia, supreme treasurer; William J. Hamilton, Oakland, Calif.; William Smith, Rochester, N. Y.; Henry W. Busch, William Nast, Long Island City, N. Y., and Isaac Fuld, supreme council; John H. Forrest, Pittsburgh; William Tintauer, Milwaukee; and Bert W. Johnson, Chicago, supreme trustees, and Mrs. Jane Debus of Columbia, Penn., grand regent of the women of the Moose.

Plans for the day at Plymouth were made under the general supervision of W. Lee Provel, regional director of the Moose for New England; Frank LaBell of Watertown, chairman of the convention committee, with Fire Commissioner Henry Walton of Plymouth representing the town of Plymouth, as general chairman, assisted by Charles Givonetti and James A. White.

Charles E. Temple, junior past dictator of the Plymouth Lodge of local lodge, assisted by Ernest Diebus, Albertus Williams, Thomas Lee, Joseph Corra, Anthony Bezendes, Joseph Riddell and Dictator George Courtney.
